Abbott	A.P.	Pvt.	C	1 South Carolina	Infantry	Chancellorsville, VA	5/1-5/4/1863	Confederate Honor Role	Killed in Action
Abbott	Patrick		F	1 Texas	Heavy Artillery	Sabine Pass, TX	9/8/1863	Davis Guard Medal	In one of the most incredible actions of the war; an artillery company of less than 50 men successfully repulsed a Federal armada of more than 20 warships headed by four heavily armed gunboats. This action, fought at Sabine Pass, Texas on September 8, 1863, lasted only 45 minutes, yet effectively prevented the invasion of southeast Texas.

Armant	Leopold Ludger	Colonel		18 Louisiana	Consolidated Regiment	Mansfield, LA	4/8/1864	Medal of Honor	"With his regiment situated on the extreme left of the line, and under orders to hold back half of his men as a reserve, Colonel Armant nevertheless elected to lead the remaining half in the attack. Having advanced against the enemy position and endured a very heavy fire of artillery and musketry, Colonel Armant had his horse shot from under him. In that instant, noticing that his color bearer was down, Colonel Armant seized the standard and bore it forward. Although desperately wounded moments later, he kept the colors aloft, and despite two additional wounds, maintained his post on the field. When last seen alone, he was prostrate, trying to hold up his flag...bidding defiance to his destroyers, thus even unto death, providing his men with an extraordinary, inspirational example of heroic leadership."

Ballenger	Adam Washington	Sergeant		13 South Carolina	Infantry	Deep Bottom, VA	7/28/1864	Medal of Honor	"During the charge of the 12th and 13th South Carolina Regiments which threw the enemy into confusion, Sergeant Ballenger left in command, and alone, rushed forward and captured one of the guns of the enemy's artillery. In his desperate fight with the enemy teamsters who sought to retake the cannon and move it to the rear, Sergeant Ballenger, although dangerously exposed to enemy fire, cut the traces to the horses, then mounted the gun and single-handedly defended the piece until reinforcements arrived."

Barbee	Wilson	Pvt.		1 Texas	Infantry	Gettysburg, PA	7/2/1863	Medal of Honor	"Although detailed as a courier to the division commander, Pvt. Barbee joined his regiment near Devil's Den during the hottest part of the engagement. Eager for action, Pvt. Barbee climbed a high prominent rock and with wounded compatriots passing him loaded muskets, opened fire on the enemy. Although dangerously exposed to a storm of enemy fire by his defiant, erect stance on the rock, Pvt. Barbee continued to discharge his weapons until knocked from his position by a bullet to the right leg. Despite his wound, he promptly reclimbed the rock and continued to fire at the enemy. Moments later, a bullet to his left leg tumbled him from his perch, but again he climbed to the top of the rock and fought on. After having fired more than two dozen rounds, a third, serious wound to the body knocked Pvt. Barbee into a crevice where, despite his cries for aid so that he might continue the fight, he lay trapped on his back until freed at battle's end. His reckless example of brazen valor solidified the battle line during the height of the fighting and remained an inspiration to his comrades for the rest of their lives."

With no concern for his own safety, Private Bland grabbed the flag and in the midst of the shelling, ran for the mound Battery. Finding the halyards unreveed, he braved a heavy fire of shot and shell from the enemy fleet by personally climbing the flagstaff and fastening the flag. Determined to destroy his staff, the enemy concentrated their guns on the Mound Battery, eventually cutting loose the lower end of the flag. Again, Private Bland climbed the staff and at great personal peril, reattached the flag with his necktie where, although torn by shell fragments, it continued to fly throughout the engagement."

Bliemel	Emmeran, Fath	Chaplain		10 Tennessee	Infantry	Jonesboro, GA	8/31/1864	Medal of Honor	"Although a non-combatant, Father Bliemel joined his regiment in their assault on the enemy's fortified works. Disregarding his own safety and not content to remain in the rear, Father Bliemel continued forward into the thickest of the fighting and began ministering to the needs of the wounded and dying. Despite the extreme danger, he continued his work and when the attack was repulsed, accompanied the litter bearers to the rear. But while tending to a fallen soldier, he witnessed the wounding of the colonel of his regiment. Unwilling to abandon his commanding officer, he stopped and went back for him. Seeing that the wounds were mortal, Father Bliemel instead knelt in the field and began to administer the last sacrament on the dying man's behalf. There, with his hands uplifted to God in petition for his colonel's soul, Father Bliemel was decapitated by a shell from the enemy's artillery."

Burke	James	Cpl.	B	4 Texas	Infantry			The Texas Gold Star	In January 1865, General Robert E. Lee received a small package from "a young lady of Texas" containing nine gold stars. It was her desire that these gold stars be presented to the bravest soldiers of Hood's Texas Brigade. Lee forwarded the stars to the "Commanding Officer of Hood's Texas Brigade in care of Senator Louis Wigfall with the following observation. "Where all are so meritorious, and have done so much for the honor of their State, I know it will be difficult to select the most worthy, but from your intimate knowledge of their deeds and conduct in action, you can with more certainty than any other, bestow them in accordance with the wishes of the donor. I therefore commit them to you."

Cleburne	Patrick Ronayne	Maj. General		Cleburne's Division	Division Commander	Franklin, TN	11/30/1864	Medal of Honor	"With the words, 'If we are to die, let us die like men,' General Cleburne led his division forward in the great charge against a waiting enemy protected by three lines of heavy entrenchments. Upon the capture of the first line, General Cleburne, riding across his division and perilously exposed to an intense fire of artillery and musketry, urged his men onward against the second line. Despite his horse being killed by artillery fire, General Cleburne found a second horse and was in the process of mounting when it was killed by a cannonball. Waving his cap and with utter disregard for his own safety, he then advanced on foot, leading the charge against the enemy's second line where he perished."

Cook	J.W.	Pvt.	H	3 Arkansas	Infantry			The Texas Gold Star	In January 1865, General Robert E. Lee received a small package from "a young lady of Texas" containing nine gold stars. It was her desire that these gold stars be presented to the bravest soldiers of Hood's Texas Brigade. Lee forwarded the stars to the "Commanding Officer of Hood's Texas Brigade in care of Senator Louis Wigfall with the following observation. "Where all are so meritorious, and have done so much for the honor of their State, I know it will be difficult to select the most worthy, but from your intimate knowledge of their deeds and conduct in action, you can with more certainty than any other, bestow them in accordance with the wishes of the donor. I therefore commit them to you."

de Polignac	Camille Armand Jules Marie	Maj. General		Polignac's Brigade		Mansfield, LA	4/8/1864	Medal of Honor	"Leaving his native France to offer his sword in service to the Confederate States of America, General Polignac assumed command of a brigade of Texas infantry and despite their suspicion and discontent, won their allegiance with his careful attention and consideration to their well-being. Sustained by a mutual confidence and esprit de corps , General Polignac rode forward with his brigade in the attack at Mansfield and despite heavy casualties from a concentrated fire of musketry and artillery, maintained his brigade's advance in good order. Upon the death of the division commander, the attack faltered by General Polignac quickly assumed command and personally led the two brigades in a renewed attack that broke the enemy line and effectively stopped their advance in the region."

Dowling	Richard William	1st. Lt.		1 Texas	Heavy Artillery	Sabine Pass	9/8/1863	Medal of Honor	"Attacked by four enemy gun boats, Lt. Dowling ordered his 42 men to hold their fire until the gunboats reached a premeasured range. At his command and despite the hot and furious assault upon their position, Lt. Dowling's men answered with an incredible accurate fire. After 45 minutes of action in which 137 projectiles were fired from six guns - two of which were soon putout of action - Lt. Dowling's command inflicted more than 400 casualties and compelled the surrender of the Clifton and Sachem together with 350 prisoners while themselves sustaining no serious injuries. By his intrepid leadership and defense at Sabine Pass, Lt. Dowling thwarted an amphibious enemy invasion of Texas by 5,000 infantry on an armade of twenty-two transports and four gunships."

Durham	William	Pvt.	D	1 Texas	Infantry			The Texas Gold Star	In January 1865, General Robert E. Lee received a small package from "a young lady of Texas" containing nine gold stars. It was her desire that these gold stars be presented to the bravest soldiers of Hood's Texas Brigade. Lee forwarded the stars to the "Commanding Officer of Hood's Texas Brigade in care of Senator Louis Wigfall with the following observation. "Where all are so meritorious, and have done som much for the honor of their State, I know it will be difficult to select the most worthy, but from your intimate knowledge of their deeds and conduct in action, you can with more certainty than any other, bestow them in accordance with the wishes of the donor. I therefore commit them to you."

Fontaine	Lamar	Pvt.		Discharged Soldier	N/A	Seige of Vicksburg, MS	5/24/1863	Medal of Honor	"Although crippled and still suffering from lingering battle wounds, Private Fontaine volunteered to carry dispatches and 18,000 desperately needed percussion caps through the enemy's siege lines to the Confederate defenders in Vicksburg. Traveling alone and often in disguise, Private Fontaine rode north to the Yazoo River. After losing his horse in a successful effort to avoid capture by the enemy, Private Fontaine seized a small dugout and started downstream. Despite the loss of his haversack and a critical shortage of drinking water, he paddled and floated through dense swamps and flooded bayous, traveling by night, hiding by day. In constant danger of capture as a spy, Private Fontaine nevertheless pushed closer to the city, passing through the midst of enemy gunboats undetected, and delivered his dispatches and precious cargo of caps to the commanding general five days after he departed."

Forrest	Nathan Bedford	Colonel		Forrest's Cavalry	Cavalry	Shiloh, TN	4/8/1862	Medal of Honor	"Confronted by advancing regiments of enemy infantry and cavalry, Colonel Forrest instead seized the initiative and with 350 troopers - the rear guard of the army - charged the infantry, wrecked their line, and sent them in confusion against their cavalry. With the enemy advance shattered, Colonel Forrest personally led a vigorous pursuit of the fugitives, racing far ahead of his men and stopping only when suddenly faced with a brigade of enemy infantry drawn up in the line of battle. Alone and surrounded by dozens of horsemen shouting "Kill him" and "Shoot that man" Colonel Forrest fought desperately to cut his way free. Despite his mount mortally wounded and himself desperately hurt with a bullet lodged against his spine, Colonel Forrest shot his way to safety with his service revolver, providing his men with an outstanding example of the type of personal bravery that would characterize his actions throughout the war."

General		Garnett's Brigade	Infantry	Gettysburg, PA	7/3/1863	Medal of Honor	"Disregarding a painful, near crippling injury to his leg, General Garnett left his ambulance to lead his brigade in the great charge. Learning of divisional orders that all officers would accompany the attack on foot, General Garnett, unable to walk yet determined to go forward, sought and received permission to proceed on horseback, fully cognizant of the peril of his request. Despite a withering fire of artillery and musketry, General Garnett maintained his brigade in good order, both by his very visible presence and with words of constant counsel to his men. In the last moments before he perished, General Garnett was still mounted and at the head of his brigade, having led his men through a devastating fire across nearly across a mile of open field to the very apex of the enemy position."

Green	Thomas	Brig. General		Green's Texas Cavalry	Cavalry	Blair's Landing, LA	4/12/1864	Medal of Honor	"With his cavalry dismounted and engaged along the river bank with an enemy gunboat, General Green perceived that musketry alone would not overwhelm the ironclad. Yet observing that the portholes of the vessel were its most vulnerable points, General Green ordered his men to concentrate their fire upon them. Seeing that this angle of fire was still ineffective, he called for volunteers to follow him down the bank and into the river in a perilous attempt to fire directly into the portholes and compel the surrender of the gunboat. With his volunteers massing at the water's edge for this desperate charge, General Green rode forward into the river to lead them and moments later was instantly killed by enemy artillery fire."

Hampton	Wade	Brigadier General		Hampton's Brigade		Gettysburg, PA	7/3/1863	Medal of Honor	"Although suffering a sabre wound to the head from a previous day, General Hampton, by personal example, led his men in a desperate charge against a determined foe. While the fighting swirled hand-to-hand, General Hampton felled three of the enemy with his revolver and ran one through with his sword. Spotting one of his own troopers battling alone, surrounded by several assailants, General Hampton single-handedly charged to the soldier's aid, saving the man's life by knocking his closest attacker out of the saddle. Despite a second sabre wound that fractured his skull, General Hampton refused to abandon the soldier. Blinded by his own blood, he fought on, killing several attackers with his sword despite yet another wound to his side."

Hancock voluntarily left the cover of the traverses and braved a terrific storm of musketry - perhaps some of the most intense of the war - to bring badly ammunition to his exhausted comrades in arms. Although detailed as a courier to the brigade commander, he repeatedly risked his life to cross the bullet swept terrain in the all-day fight in the rain, promptly returning each time with more cartridges for the men in the works with little concern for his own safety. Pvt. Hancock's unselfish action despite witnessing the death or wounding of so many others in the same attempt, was valor of the highest order and marked him for special notice from the brigadier general commanding."

Hemphill	Jacob	Sgt.	H	5 Texas	Infantry			The Texas Gold Star	In January 1865, General Robert E. Lee received a small package from "a young lady of Texas" containing nine gold stars. It was her desire that these gold stars be presented to the bravest soldiers of Hood's Texas Brigade. Lee forwarded the stars to the "Commanding Officer of Hood's Texas Brigade in care of Senator Louis Wigfall with the following observation. "Where all are so meritorious, and have done som much for the honor of their State, I know it will be difficult to select the most worthy, but from your intimate knowledge of their deeds and conduct in action, you can with more certainty than any other, bestow them in accordance with the wishes of the donor. I therefore commit them to you."

Keelan	James	Pvt		Thomas' Legion		Strawberry Plains, TN	11/8/1861	Medal of Honor	"With instructions to guard the railroad bridge at Strawberry Plains against all marauders, Private Keelan single-handedly defended his post against an overwhelming enemy force intent on burning the bridge. Armed with but a single-shot pistol and a Bowie knife, Private Keelan killed the first sapper at point-blank range. In the desperate hand-to-hand fight that followed, Private Keelan was shot in the left elbow, the right arm, and the right hip, suffered three sabre cuts to the neck and scalp, and had his left hand severed at the wrist. Despite these wounds, Private Keelan shashed to death two of his attackers and seriously wounded an undetermined number of the enemy before they fled the bridge."

Kirkland	Richard Rowland	Sgt.		2 South Carolina	Infantry	Fredericksburg, VA	12/14/1862	Medal of Honor	"On the day after the battle, unable to endure any longer the cries of the wounded for water, Sgt Kirkland vaulted the stone wall armed only with full canteens in an effort to relieve the suffering of the maimed. Perilously exposed yet miraculously unscathed by the initial musketry of the enemy who mistook his intentions, Sgt. Kirkland commenced his mission of mercy to the wounded, arranging knapsacks as pillows, straightening broken limbs, covering freezing bodies with overcoats, and always quenching desperate thirsts with life giving water. For an hour and a half, he went about his humane work as both sides held their fire in admiration, until all the wounded in that part of the field were tended."

Knight	James Polk	Pvt.	H	1 Texas	Infantry			The Texas Gold Star	In January 1865, General Robert E. Lee received a small package from "a young lady of Texas" containing nine gold stars. It was her desire that these gold stars be presented to the bravest soldiers of Hood's Texas Brigade. Lee forwarded the stars to the "Commanding Officer of Hood's Texas Brigade in care of Senator Louis Wigfall with the following observation. "Where all are so meritorious, and have done som much for the honor of their State, I know it will be difficult to select the most worthy, but from your intimate knowledge of their deeds and conduct in action, you can with more certainty than any other, bestow them in accordance with the wishes of the donor. I therefore commit them to you."

Lemon	James Lile	Captain		18 Georgia	Infantry	Fort Sanders, TN	11/29/1863	Medal of Honor	"Fully recognizing the desperate nature of the early morning attack against the enemy works, Captain Lemon nevertheless led his company with great determination across an open field of fire, crisscrossed by wire and blocked by abatis. Charging into a hailstorm of musketry and canister, the Confederates pushed their attack to the very walls of the fort only to falter in the deep ditch surrounding the works. Realizing that the men would be slaughtered if they did not carry the parapet, Captain Lemon took his sword and began digging steps in the frozen, slippery clay of the fortification. Despite point blank musketry and exploding shells lobbed by the enemy from the works, Captain Lemon safely reached the slope of the parapet. Although alone and perilously exposed in this dangerous position, he heroically assisted a number of others in getting out of the trench. Seeing his brigade commander killed, Captain Lemon courageously led the men with him to the top of the parapet and into the fort where he fell severely wounded, and a prisoner of war."

Llewellyn	David Herbert	M.D.		C.S.N. Kearsarge	Civilian doctor	Off the coast of Cherbourg, France	6/19/1864	Medal of Honor	"With the battle lost and the Alabama going down, Dr. Llewellyn, upon hearing the order to abandon ship, patiently assisted the wounded into a crowded lifeboat. Despite the entreaties of those he had helped, Dr. Llewellyn remained aboard the Alabama, refusing the board the lifeboat for fear of capsizing the already dangerously cowed vessel. When the great ship disappeared beneath the waves, Dr. Llewellyn was last seen alive jumping into the turbulent open sea, never once mentioning that he could not swim."

May	W.C.	Cpl.	H	4 Texas	Infantry			The Texas Gold Star	In January 1865, General Robert E. Lee received a small package from "a young lady of Texas" containing nine gold stars. It was her desire that these gold stars be presented to the bravest soldiers of Hood's Texas Brigade. Lee forwarded the stars to the "Commanding Officer of Hood's Texas Brigade in care of Senator Louis Wigfall with the following observation. "Where all are so meritorious, and have done som much for the honor of their State, I know it will be difficult to select the most worthy, but from your intimate knowledge of their deeds and conduct in action, you can with more certainty than any other, bestow them in accordance with the wishes of the donor. I therefore commit them to you."

Despite the death and wounding of many around him, Private Mays, although dangerously exposed, defiantly waved his banner. When the colors were twice shot from his grasps, he retrieved them although fully aware that he had become a specific target. But with utter disregard for his personal safety, Private Mays remained in the open until reinforcements arrived, and despite the best efforts of the enemy, he survived the battle unhurt, returning to camp with a flag that bore 27 bullet-holes."

Mosby	John Singleton	Capt.		Mosby's Regulars	Partisan Rangers	Raid on Fairfax Courthouse, VA	March 8-9, 1863	Medal of Honor	"With only twenty-nine men, Captain Mosby stealthily entered the enemy's line undetected and under cover of night, made his way to the headquarters of the commanding general at Fairfax Courthouse. After ordering telegraph lines cut and all combatants, horses, arms, and ammunition siezed, Captain Mosby accompanied by several raiders entered a private residence and captured the brigadier general commanding. With his raid complete, his captured stores and prisoners guarded, and all his men accounted for, Captain Mosby, now more than ten miles behind enemy lines, led his men south, then abruptly west to confuse his pursuers. Again employing stealth and brazen audacity, Captain Mosby guided his column into the night past numerous enemy camps and picket posts until dawn, he was safely beyond enemy lines. As a result of his daring raid, Captain Mosby captured one brigadier general, two captains, thirty other prisoners, fifty-eight horses and numerous arms and equipment...all without firing a shot. In this singular action that so typified his movements throughout the war, Captain Mosby instilled

Overby	William Thomas	Pvt.		43 Virginia Cavalry (Mosby's Rangers)	Cavalry (Partisan Rangers)	Front Royal, VA	9/23/1864	Medal of Honor	"Captured with five others in a skirmish outside Front Royal, Pvt. Overby and his compatriots, instead of receiving humane treatment accorded prisoners of war, were ordered to be executed. Reviled and beaten by his captors, Pvt. Overby could only watch as three of his fellow prisoners were wrenched away, dragged through the streets, and summarily shot. Knowing he had no chance against such a mob, Pvt. Overby nevertheless remained erect and defiant. Despite a noose around his neck, he refused to give his executioners vital information that could compromise his battalion - even in exchange for his life - and instead, with his last words, issued a dark prophecy of revenge."
Owens	Benjamin Welch	Pvt		1 Maryland	Artillery	Stephenson's Depot, VA	6/15/1863	Medal of Honor	"While serving the Number One Gun of Dement's Section which was planted squarely on the railroad bridge in advance of infantry support, dangerously exposed and blocking the retreat of the enemy from Winchester, Private Owens, at great personal peril, continued to work his gun and despite the slaughter of his fellow crewmates, remained at his post until only he and his commanding officer were left. With this officer soon seriously wounded, Private Owens alone, continued at his duties, serving his gun single-handedly under a withering fire until help arrived and the enemy was decisively repulsed and captured."

Patterson	James	Sgt.	D	4 Texas	Infantry			The Texas Gold Star	In January 1865, General Robert E. Lee received a small package from "a young lady of Texas" containing nine gold stars. It was her desire that these gold stars be presented to the bravest soldiers of Hood's Texas Brigade. Lee forwarded the stars to the "Commanding Officer of Hood's Texas Brigade in care of Senator Louis Wigfall with the following observation. "Where all are so meritorious, and have done so much for the honor of their State, I know it will be difficult to select the most worthy, but from your intimate knowledge of their deeds and conduct in action, you can with more certainty than any other, bestow them in accordance with the wishes of the donor. I therefore commit them to you."

Pender	William Dorsey	Brigadier General		Pender's Brigade		Chancellorsville, VA	5/3/1863	Medal of Honor	"Despite the waiting, unseen enemy that lay heavily entrenched across his front, General Pender realized that the dense brush would obscure him from his men if he led his brigade forward on foot. Electing to remain mounted despite the hazard, he personally grabbed the colors of one of his regiments and led his brigade against the enemy's works. Miraculously unscathed despite a withering fire of musketry and heavy artillery, General Pender rode along the entire extent of his brigade encouraging his men, at one point riding up and over the entrenchments of the enemy with the regimental standard still in hand. When his own brigade was relieved, General Pender remained on the field, leading yet other attacks until the enemy was driven from his front. His outstanding example of confidence and personal bravery was a signal ingredient to victory, an inspiration to the army, and an action characterized by the commanding general as one of 'most distinguished gallantry.'"

Read	Charles William	Lt.		Confederates States Navy		Cruise of the Clarence, Tacony, and Archer	6/6 thru 6/27/1863	Medal of Honor	"Armed with but a single howitzer and commanding a crew of just 21 men, Lt. Read embarked on a mission to wreak havoc on the commercial shipping interests of the enemy. In a series of bold attacks marked by audacity and novel self-reliance, Lt. Read successfully captured 21 vessels bound to or from enemy ports without the loss of a man. Twice he moved his command to capture vessels in an effort to confuse the enemy search force of more than 40 ships. Learning that the revenue cutter Caleb Cushing was anchored at Portland, Maine, Lt. Read entered the harbor and under the cover of night, quietly seized the cutter and cleared the harbor before dawn despite the disadvantage of tide and light wind. Pursued by an overwhelming enemy force, Lt. Read kept his guns firing until his ammunition was exhausted. Realizing that further resistance was futile, Lt. Read ordered his men into lifeboats and then fired the Caleb Cushing before surrendering to the enemy, having spectacularly disrupted commercial shipping along the Atlantic coast of the United States."

Rector	William Field	1st Lt.		39 Arkansas	Infantry	Helena, AR	7/4/1863	Medal of Honor	"With all of the officers of his regiment either wounded or dead, Lt. Rector, as adjutant of the regiment, immediately assumed command and personally led his men in the desperate attack up Graveyard Hill. Pushing rapidly forward, he soon found himself alone, some fifty yards in advance of the line. Fearing that the regiment would falter under the withering fire of the enemy guns and the excessive summer heat, Lt. Rector single-handedly scaled the breastworks of the enemy. From this dangerous position, just twenty feet from the enemy line, he placed his cap upon his sword, held it out with his right hand and cheered his men forward. Although perilously exposed to massive enemy fire, he continued to wave his cap and exhort his regiment towards the works until hit by a ball, breaking his arm and dropping his sword and cap on the works. Taking up his sword with his left hand, he ran it through the cap and defiantly thrust it aloft once more, encouraging all of the field with his heroic example until he was mortally wounded by a second round."

Rheins	Charles		F	1 Texas	Heavy Artillery	Sabine Pass, TX	9/8/1863	Davis Guard Medal	In one of the most incredible actions of the war; an artillery company of less than 50 men successfully repulsed a Federal armada of more than 20 warships headed by four heavily armed gunboats. This action, fought at Sabine Pass, Texas on September 8, 1863, lasted only 45 minutes, yet effectively prevented the invasion of southeast Texas.

Ridley	Samuel Jones	Capt.		1 Mississippi	Artillery	Baker's Creek, MS	5/16/1863	Medal of Honor	"Riding hard to bring the last reserves to the field after the Confederate line had been broken on the far left, Capt. Ridley personally guided the 42 Georgia Volunteers and two guns of his battery to a position where they could enfilade the advance of the enemy. Although badly outnumbered Capt. Ridley directed and maintained a heavy fire into the attacking enemy line, thwarting the momentum of the assault that threatened to envelop the Confederate left flank. Seeing all infantry support driven from the field and realizing that many of his men lay killed or wounded, Capt. Ridley nevertheless joined the survivors of one gun crew to keep the cannon firing. Ignoring his own safety despite horrific casualties and realizing that his own position was in danger of being overrun, he continued to serve the gun until he alone stood at the cannon's mouth. When last seen alive, he was still at his post, dealing destruction to the enemy and unwilling unto death to yield his ground."

Staples	J.D.	Pvt.	E	3 Arkansas	Infantry			The Texas Gold Star	In January 1865, General Robert E. Lee received a small package from "a young lady of Texas" containing nine gold stars. It was her desire that these gold stars be presented to the bravest soldiers of Hood's Texas Brigade. Lee forwarded the stars to the "Commanding Officer of Hood's Texas Brigade in care of Senator Louis Wigfall with the following observation. "Where all are so meritorious, and have done som much for the honor of their State, I know it will be difficult to select the most worthy, but from your intimate knowledge of their deeds and conduct in action, you can with more certainty than any other, bestow them in accordance with the wishes of the donor. I therefore commit them to you."

Welborn	Cadmus	Sgt.	F	5 Texas	Infantry			The Texas Gold Star	In January 1865, General Robert E. Lee received a small package from "a young lady of Texas" containing nine gold stars. It was her desire that these gold stars be presented to the bravest soldiers of Hood's Texas Brigade. Lee forwarded the stars to the "Commanding Officer of Hood's Texas Brigade in care of Senator Louis Wigfall with the following observation. "Where all are so meritorious, and have done som much for the honor of their State, I know it will be difficult to select the most worthy, but from your intimate knowledge of their deeds and conduct in action, you can with more certainty than any other, bestow them in accordance with the wishes of the donor. I therefore commit them to you."

Wilson	Joseph		F	1 Texas	Heavy Artillery	Sabine Pass, TX	9/8/1863	Davis Guard Medal	In one of the most incredible actions of the war; an artillery company of less than 50 men successfully repulsed a Federal armada of more than 20 warships headed by four heavily armed gunboats. This action, fought at Sabine Pass, Texas on September 8, 1863, lasted only 45 minutes, yet effectively prevented the invasion of southeast Texas.

Wirtz	Henry	Captain		Camp Sumter, GA	Ex-Camp Commandant	Washington D.C.	11/10/1865	Medal of Honor	*Arrested in a time of peace while under the protection of his parole, Captain Wirtz was nevertheless tried by a military tribunal on charges of excessive cruelty to Federal prisoners held at Camp Sumter. Despite manipulated evidence and perjured testimony, he was convicted and condemned. Yet when offered his life on the eve of his execution if he would incriminate senior members of the Confederate Government including President Jefferson Davis, he chose to forfeit his life instead of the truth."
